What Are Active Citizenship Projects?

Active citizenship projects are ways people help make their community better. These projects can be big or small. They focus on solving problems or making life friendlier for everyone.

Some examples are cleaning up parks, helping at food banks, or teaching others new skills. Anyone can start these projects, from kids to adults. The goal is to be a good neighbor and make good changes.

Active citizens work together, share ideas, and take action. They don't wait for others to fix things. Instead, they roll up their sleeves and get to work. These projects help build stronger, happier, and healthier communities for all.
